

Facts About the Child Care Assistance Program (CCAP)

Kentucky's Child Care Assistance Program assists families in accessing and obtaining child care for:

- Low income families with a working adult, an adult enrolled full-time with a trade school, college, or university, or an adult participating in the SNAP Employment & Training (E&T) Program.
- Individuals that are meeting eligibility requirements as a full-time student will have a 60 month cumulative lifetime limit. Child care benefits will end after that period, if the parent is not meeting the work requirement or enrolled in SNAP E&T.
- KTAP recipients who need child care while they participate in Kentucky Works activities. These include employment, education, job preparation activities, and other activities designed to assist the family to attain self-sufficiency.
- Families not meeting the work or education/training requirement may have up to a minimum of three (3) months of eligibility to engage in job search once in a twelve (12) month time period at initial eligibility. Child care benefits will end after that period if the parent has not found employment or is not enrolled full-time in a qualified education/training activity, including SNAP E&T.
- Families determined by the Division of Protection and Permanency/Kinship Programs as needing child care to address safety issues in their home.
- Teen parents attending elementary/middle/high school or GED classes.

Transitional Child Care Assistance

When a recipient's income goes over the SMI limit during report a change or recertification, they are potentially eligible for an additional six months of Transitional Child Care assistance. Recipients will be eligible for this additional assistance, only if they provide all required verifications by the due date. You can receive this Transitional Child Care assistance only once every 12 months.

Copayments

Copayments are determined by the amount of countable income, household size and the number of children needing care in the household.
